President's Message

Hello Members,

Just as you will do for your country in November, so must you do for your club. It's election time again. Time for you to chose once again who will be the leaders of our club. I urge each and every one of you to either mail in your ballot or bring it to the next meeting but most of all, exercise your right to vote; Not only for our Club but for our country as well.

I also urge you to consider your choices carefully. Don't just vote for someone because they're your buddy or they've held that position for a long time. There are a lot of new members seeking this office this year. Most of them are seeking director seats. I urge you to consider them for these positions. Now I don't mean this to sound negative towards our current directors. They've all done a fine job for the Club and have been very supportive of me. I've just never seen so many come out to seek positions in the club before and I wanted to recognize them and thank them for their desire and dedication.

I want to thank Kenny, Nellie, Cheryl, and Terry Wagner for joining me on the 17th to clean up our strech of highway. We picked up 15 bags of trash, a piece of pipe, and a footstool.

There will be a directors, officers, & chairpersons meeting at my house some time in November. We will decide the date at the November meeting.

Until the meeting, Kevin

Happy Thanksgiving

MCA National Show

In Lynchburg Va. was big success many of our members attented the show and five participate in showing of their cars. They were Brenda Jones, Donnie Nichols, Carroll Lipscombe, Donnie Herndon, and Richard Jones. Among them Brenda and Donnie Herndon took first in their classes.

But out of all Richard got the shaft , I mean the shaft, first on the way up the transmittion said "Bye,Bye". Then came the judge at 5:00 pm. and said "We forgot to judge your car" and so by this time every body was getting ready to start on happy hour at the bar. Richard and his so called judge were going over his car with a flash light trying to find some orange peel to make the judge happy.

Poor Richard got the midnite award and try to still a cup of coffee from the MCA head judge. Richard, sorry but maybe next time you can show them.

To the members of The CENTRAL VIRGINIA MUSTANG CLUB, Inc.:

Hi, I am Terry Wagner and I am running for President of the club. The long time members know who I am but the newer members might not.

So let me take a moment to introduce myself. I have a 1970 BOSS 302 MUSTANG, a 1974 MACH 1 MUSTANG, and a 1966 GT MUSTANG. I bought my first MUSTANG in April 1965. I am married and am the owner of a computer repair company.

I was the President of the CENTRAL VIRGINIA MUSTANG CLUB from 1985, when we began, to 1989.

During that period the Club grew from about 25 members to close to 200 members. We had picnics, parties, car shows, and other car related events.

During my presidency the Club adopted our Club LOGO, our Club jacket, and Decal. In 1989 I was approached by several members that said they felt that it was time for some one else to lead the club. I did not run in 1990.

I have been approached by considerably more member in 1992 to run again. There are significant numbers of the long time members that feel the club is in dire need of my prior experience of running a car club, and my experience in running a business.

During my terms as president my efforts always reflected the wishes of the membership, on issues with which I agreed and on those that I did not.

I firmly believe that the President serves at the pleasure of the membership. Not the other way around.

If I am elected, I will do all that is in my power to reestablish The CENTRAL VIRGINIA MUSTANG CLUB, Inc. as the premier car club in Virginia.

After half a century in cars, two models really stick out

Go ahead. Slide in. Get a feel for this car, says Bob King, opening the door to a new gray Explorer just outside the showroom at Richmond Ford.

You'll want to adjust the seat, he suggests, and I do. At the same time,

I get a whiff of "new car" smell, an odor impossible to describe but so distinctive and so suggestive of chrome-bright newness that it's probably sold millions of automobiles. Distinctive might describe King's practiced soft sell, too. It's a nice easy spiel with the timing of a veteran salesman.

It's no surprise that King, 66, has the routine down. He went on the company payroll on Oct. 1, 1941, pumping gas and delivering parts. Today, he's president and chief executive officer of Richmond Motor Inc., Richmond Ford's parent company. In the ensuing 50 years, he's seen the car market go from Depression lows to post-war highs. And he's seen every kind of car imaginable — clunkers and cream puffs, dream machines and hunks of tin.

See what I told you, King says, standing beside the Explorer, leaning on the door, pointing forward and rear. The view is great. Customers tell me all the time they love the view. It gives them some range and a feeling of safety.

ED CREWS

People love this car. It's done really well for us. To tell you the truth, he says, it has to be one of my favorites.

And what, I ask him, are his other favorites after five decades with the family car business?

Predictably, they're all Fords and top-sellers and marked by a certain style, like the 1958 Thunderbird and the 1955 Ford sedan. His favorites' list is short, surprisingly so. But it is dominated by just two cars on which he talk for hours — the 1940 Ford convertible and the 1965 Mustang.

"Oh that Ford convertible," King says, rocking back in his office chair. "What a knockout!"

It was a handsome car with that Rubenesque 1940s styling and bright, exuberant colors, like George Washington blue and cherry red.

For King, this car's appeal wasn't just its look or its popularity with customers. It also was a strong symbol of the brief golden time between the Depression's end and the beginning of America's involvement in World War II.

With the 1929 crash, the bottom dropped out of both the U.S. economy and the auto market. The only way King's father, who became involved with the dealership in 1916, survived the downturn was by branching into car service, engine repair and parts sales. People didn't have money to buy new cars, but they would find enough for repairs. Even at that, it was a tenuous existence for an auto dealer.

By 1940, however, the economy was improving and with it car sales.

Europe was at war, but America was not. If there was concern about getting dragged into the fight, there also was elation at having gotten through the Depression. A convertible seemed like a nice way to celebrate.

"It was a signature car," King says of that convertible. "In 1940, people felt like they'd survived the Depression. People wanted to celebrate."

They did until the war came and rationing eventually made civilian cars difficult to get. The war's end unleashed years of pent-up demand, and the auto market boomed well into 1965 when Ford produced one of the most popular cars in U.S. history — the Mustang.

Even before it arrived in showrooms around the nation, excitement was building over it.

King recalls clearly the first time he did see the Mustang. That was in 1964. He was in Detroit for a special presentation to dealers. Arriving early, he ran into a friend who suggested they sneak into the meeting room for an advance peak. They were stunned.

"Everybody who ever saw it, knew it was going to be a hit," he recalls.

And it was. The Mustang sold itself. At the height of its popularity, King remembers having a waiting list for buyers. Simple, small, sporty and somehow perfectly timed for the market, the car took the country by storm. It was designed to appeal to the youth market but transcended age groups and social classes. "All kinds of people we'd never seen came in to buy one," he says.

King talks about the Mustang with the affection some men reserve for golf or tennis.

"It just dazzled me," he says of the car, leaning back in his chair with a smile and a contented sigh. "It just dazzled me."
